HUA HIN - CHA-AM

Hua Hin and Cha-am have long been recognized as glamorous summer retreats for the Thai elite and aristocracy from Bangkok. Now foreign visitors are also falling in love with these laidback destinations that have white beaches and a tropical climate. Whether it is a long weekend or regular holidays, these twin beaches are always filled with visitors wishing to bask in the relaxed atmosphere of the renowned seaside towns.

While Hua Hin is a perfect combination of natural tranquility and cultural grandeur, Cha-am, on the other hand, is more vibrant, busy and a fun-filled destination with water sports and horse riding on the beach, and succulent seafood for both restaurants and food stalls. Various accommodation options are available, ranging from first-class international resorts to local guesthouses. With a variety of relaxing activities such as spas, Hua Hin and Cha-am are two of Thailand's best-kept holiday secrets.

1. Hat Hua Hin: 68 km. from the city of PhetchaburiK11
Thailand's oldest and most traditional seaside resort has long been a favourite weekend and summer retreat since the reign of King Rama VI. And the 5-kilometre-long white sand beach stretching all the way to Khao Takiap (Chopstick Mountain) is a perfect sanctuary for getting away from it all.

2. Hat Cha-am: 40 km. from the city of PhetchaburiK8/Cc15
Phetchaburi's most popular beach, Cha-am is well known for its two contrasting charms. Locally referred to as "Khao Wang", this famous historical site of Phetchaburi is Thailand's first summer palace complex ever constructed on top of a mountain. The place provides visitors with a unique fusion of neo-classical, Thai and Chinese architectural styles—a combination that makes the park a very worthwhile destination in itself. The main attractions are Phra Kaeo Noi Temple, which was built as a royal chapel according to traditional beliefs, and Phrathat Chomphet, a big white pagoda located at the center. Open daily. Call 66 3240 1006, 66 3242 5600.

You can charter a long-tailed boat to soak up the sights of Som Island, explore the source of the Phetchaburi River or try fishing. A wide range of restaurants offering great local food are available too.

7. Hat Chao Samran-Hat Puek Tian: 15 km. from the city of PhetchaburiL5
Located before Hat Cha-am are two beaches that may appear different in character but are equal in beauty. They are easy to get to and boast an array of restaurants and accommodation. Hat Puek Tian is a popular photographic spot where many sculptures of fictional characters from the work of Thailand's most famous poet, Sunthon Phu, are located.

This cave is located in Khao Sam Roi Yot National Park, a place known for its range of limestone mountains, mangrove swamps and beaches. Inside the cave is the exquisitely built Phra Thinang Khuha Kharuehat, a Thai-style, four-porched wooden pavilion constructed during the reign of King Rama V. A nearby attraction is a large banyan tree with aerial roots—a romantic archway created by nature. It is believed that walking under this arch will be a blessing, especially when it comes to love. Couples will find their bond of love strengthened, while those who are single will find the love of their lives.

9. Laem Phak Bia Bird Watching Spot: 12 km. from the city of PhetchaburiM4
Well known among serious birdwatchers, the place offers rare opportunities to watch mangrove birds. A regular meeting point for both beginners and professional birdwatchers is a small nursery pond where one can stroll around to explore the diversity of mangrove forests. The black backed Russian gull (only seen during the migratory period) can be spotted at San Sai, which is reachable via a boat trip from the pier.

Regional Cuisine

The seafood in Hua Hin is well known for its freshness. Must-try dishes are oyster omelets and preserved clams with papaya salad. At Pran Buri Market, tender pork and the thick spiced stock of Emperor's rice noodle are two most popular dishes. At Hua Hin Night Market, however, recommended food, dessert and beverage are pork porridge, aromatic coffee, fried Chinese doughnut and soft buns (Salapao). It is recommended that your meal be completed with Roti, a dessert that even movie stars have to queue up for. The stall is located in the middle of Hua Hin Night Market. What's so special about this dessert lies in the special mixture of the dough and a wide variety of fillings: pineapple, pandan custard, coffee, malt, honey, strawberries, eggs, raisins, and marmalade.

Phetchaburi's savory dishes are:

"Khanom Chin Thot Man" rice noodles served with fried fish cakes, topped with chili or sweet sauce.

"Ngop Ping" ground fish mixed with chili paste, wrapped and grilled in banana leaves.

Rice Noodle with Beef and Chilli Sauce rice noodles with peppered meatballs served with hot and spicy chili sauce.

"Kaeng Hua Tan" traditional local cuisine made of meat and young Palmyra palm mixed with chili paste.

"Khao Chae Mueang Phet" well-known local dish that has already become one of Thailand's must refreshing summer dishes. Khao Chae is chilled boiled rice in jasmine-scented iced water served with an array of delicate side dishes that include deep-fried shrimp paste balls and deep-fried stuffed bell peppers. The dish is available from restaurants located around the market or along the Phetchaburi River bank near the railway station.

Phetchaburi is also renowned for its variety of desserts and fruit. After lunch or dinner, "Khanom Mo Kaeng" (baked Thai-style custard), "Chao Tan Chueam" (palm seed in thick syrup), "Ta Not Thot", "Khanom Tan", "Milk Jelly", "Fresh Palm Juice" and crispy refreshing rose apples are on the must-try list.
